Meat market. The popular event is a hot spot for singles looking to connect.

Internet Week's Webutante Ball, which happens tonight at Marquee, is well-known for being one of New York's biggest tech parties, but it also functions as the perfect pickup spot for Silicon Alley singles.

Founder Richard Blakeley said unlike other male-dominated tech events, the Ball's gender ratio is even.

"Most tech parties in New York are after-work drinks at a bar where you come with your laptop on your back, sweating, and stand awkwardly in a corner with a bunch of other guys," said Blakeley.

But at the Webutante Ball, tech scenesters dress in tuxedos and cocktail dresses. Add a DJ and free-flowing booze and it's no surprise that the party becomes a hot spot for young people in tech looking to exchange phone numbers — and not just to network.

Lisa Besserman moved to Argentina in 2012 to found Startup Buenos Aires, but that hasn't stopped her from attending every Webutante Ball since 2009.

"I was single for the first couple of them and I always walked away with a few numbers," she said.

Graphic designer Nick McGlynn admitted to getting lucky at a Webutante Ball. "It's a prom for tech

"It's so laid-back and you're with like-minded people. It's really great to meet people you have a connection with."

nerds, and I mean, what better place to hook up than at a prom?" he asked.

At least one couple is walking down the aisle thanks to the geek chic bash. "I famously introduced two very unlikely people to each other at a Webutante Ball — and they are getting married," said journalist Julia Allison.

Every Webutante Ball features a king and queen, and couples are encouraged to strike prom poses in their photos.

Alison Flood, director of business development at ICED Media, helped organize the 2010 Webutante Ball, but couldn't flirt because of some game-killing guests: her parents.

"I'm not bringing my dad this year, so who knows what can happen? It's anyone's game," she said.

Tickets are available at TheWebutanteBall.com, but not at the door.

Court. Prosecutors say thousands of documents incriminate Grimm

Embattled Congressman Michael Grimm made his first appearance in a Brooklyn court on Monday since he was indicted in late April with perjury and tax fraud charges.

Grimm sat in court while prosecutors disclosed that they have some 7,000 pages of documents and 8,000 emails as evidence against him.

The next hearing is scheduled for July 21.

Last month, the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Eastern District of New York unsealed a 20-count indictment on charges for mail, wire and health care fraud, as well as filing false tax returns, perjury, and obstruction of an official proceeding and employing unauthorized immigrants.

"We're going to fight tooth and nail until I am fully exonerated," Grimm said shortly after the indictment was revealed.

He gave no comment to the press after Monday's hearing.

Grimm represents Staten Island and parts of Brooklyn and is up for re-election this fall.

Trial

Occupy protester sentenced for assaulting cop

An Occupy Wall Street protester convicted of assaulting a police officer during a demonstration was sentenced on Monday to a 90-day jail sentence.

A jury on May 5 found Cecily McMillan guilty of elbowing a police officer, Grantley Bovell, in the eye as he was attempting to arrest her.

McMillan, 25, was arrested along with scores of others on March 17, 2012 at a demonstration marking the protest movement's six-month anniversary in New York City.

McMillan's lawyer argued his client was reacting to someone groping one of her breasts, according to accounts of the trial. Prosecutors said that claim was a fabrication.

The 90-day sentence, followed by five years' probation, was handed down by New York State Court Justice Ronald Zweibel. McMillan had faced a potential sentence of as much as seven years in prison.

Fleet Week has

Don't be shy: Get to know the service members you meet this week throughout the city.

ALL PHOTOS RELEASED BY THE U.S. NAVY

Land, ho! Celebrate those who serve our country by visiting an event, touring a ship or just saying hello.

After missing a year due to sequestration, Fleet Week has returned to New York. Now in its 26th year, the annual celebration of military sea services embraces its mission of lighting up the city that never sleeps with military band concerts, aerial demonstrations, sports tournaments, parades and showcases of the latest maritime technology.

As always, the public is invited for guided tours of docked ships. This year, three U.S. Navy and two U.S. Coast Guard vessels are open, including the Harpers Ferry-class dock landing USS Oak Hill, the "keeper of New York Harbor" cutter Katherine Walker and the guided-missile cruiser USS Cole, which gained notoriety during the suicide attack in October 2000 that killed 17 U.S. Navy crew members and injured 39.

Festivities kicked off Monday in Basking Ridge, New Jersey, where the 45-person Navy Band Northeast "Pops Ensemble" performed pop, jazz and patriotic favorites. Today, they cross the Hudson to Manhattan for an afternoon performance in Bryant Park.

A solemn re-enlistment and promotion ceremony takes place at the 9/11

Memorial & Museum on Friday, the first day it's open to the public. This year's ceremony commemorates the 150th anniversary of the Gettysburg Address at the Soldiers and Sailors Monument on Riverside Drive.

The Navy's most valuable resource, its service men and women, numbering near 1,500 this year, also get some well-deserved R & R. For many, Fleet Week marks a return home; for others, it's a highly anticipated first visit to the city of legend.

Metro asked eight service members to share what they're looking forward to seeing and doing this week in NYC.

sights. What I'm looking forward to is visiting the Freedom Tower and the Statue of Liberty. Being in NYC for Fleet Week and being able to wear your uniform to represent the military, there is no way that you can't feel some pride for serving your country. What I enjoy most is how the people welcome you and are so grateful for your service.

Hometown: Bridgewater, N.J. I'm looking forward to representing the Navy and the USS Oak Hill honorably and proudly to family, looking forward to getting a real pastrami sandwich on kosher rye smeared with deli brown mustard with a dill pickle and coleslaw — the same meal I ate right before heading off to go to boot camp more than a year ago.

Brooklyn. Police kill man wielding scissors

Officers responding to a call about a stabbing on Sunday shot and killed a man who allegedly lunged at them.

Two NYPD officers rushed to 60 Clarkson Ave. after they received a call that a woman had been stabbed in Flatbush.

Cops arrived at the building at 10:30 p.m. where they found the victim bleeding from the shoulder in the lobby before going to the second floor, where they found the suspected assailant.

Once inside the apartment, the 39-year-old male charged the officers with scissors in hand, according to cops.

Authorities said the officers then pulled out their guns and shot the suspect, striking the man's hand and torso and killing him at the scene.

EMS took the victim to Kings County Hospital Center, where she was listed as in stable condition. The officers were taken to Maimonides Medical Center and treated for tinnitus.

Authorities bust drug ring trafficking heroin

The heroin is thought to have a value of $11 million. / NYPD

Ground zero

"These seizures and arrests demonstrate that NYC is ground zero of heroin distribution networks supplying the northeast, as well as being the prime market Mexican drug traffickers are using to earn profit from the sale of poison." DEA Special Agent James J. Hunt

Score. The drug ring was carrying heroin between New York City and Connecticut.

Police and federal agents intercepted more than 50 pounds of heroin and 20 pounds of cocaine, busting a drug ring that supplied what authorities described as the source for massive amounts of heroin sold throughout the northeast.

Investigators made the bust last week mid-delivery between the Bronx and Connecticut, where police said the heroin has double its street value.

The confiscated heroin is thought to be worth $11 million.

Two men were arrested in connection to the ring: Edualin Tapia and Guillermo Esteban Margarin, who were seen entering an apartment off Orloff Avenue in the Bronx suspected of being a heroin mill.

On May 16, the two men drove to Hartford, Connecticut, with nearly 22 pounds of the heroin and walked into an apartment with another box of nearly 29 pounds of heroin.

A joint task force of federal Drug Enforcement Agency officers, NYPD detectives and New York State police investigators entered the apartment while the suspects prepared to dump a white substance down a sink.

Both men were charged with criminal possession of a controlled substance and conspiracy. They are being detained in Connecticut pending extradition.

Did I mention the $59 price tag? This is a LOT of machine for not a lot of money. The Stauer Centurion Hybrid sports a heavy-duty alloy body, chromed and detailed with a rotating bezel that allows you to track time and speed. The luminous hour and minute hands mean you can keep working into the night. And the dual digital displays give this watch a hybrid ability. The LCD windows displays the time, day and date. ## Hacking. US accuses China of cyber spying

A U.S. grand jury has indicted five Chinese military officers on charges of hacking American companies and stealing trade secrets, the toughest action taken by Washington so far to address cyber spying by China.

China denied the charges, saying they were “made up” and would damage trust between the two nations. The Chinese foreign ministry said it would suspend the activities of the Sino-U.S. Internet working group.

The indictments mark the first time the United States has filed charges against specific officials of foreign governments, accusing them of corporate cyber spying. REUTERS

Dropout made bomb threats

A college dropout was arrested Sunday night after admitting to calling in two bomb threats to keep her family from learning she had quit Quinnipiac University, police said on Monday.

Danielle Shea, 22, of Quincy, Massachusetts, made the threats after arriving at the graduation ceremony in a cap and gown with her mother, who did not know she actually had dropped out. She “panicked” when relatives noticed her name was not on the list of graduates, police said.

Shea called in two bomb threats to the Quinnipiac University library so the ceremony would be canceled, police said. REUTERS

Webster. Dictionary adds words 'selfie,' 'tweep' and 'catfish'

"Selfie," "tweep" and "turducken" were among more than 150 new words and definitions added to the 2014 updated Merriam-Webster's Collegiate Dictionary, the publishing company said on Monday.

The additions to the U.S. dictionary reflect the growing influence of technology and social networking, the company said.

"So many of these new words show the impact of online connectivity to our lives and livelihoods," Peter Sokolowski, an editor for Merriam-Webster said in a statement. "Tweep, selfie and hashtag refer to the ways we communicate and share as individuals. Words such as crowdfunding, gamification and big data show that the Internet has changed business in profound ways."

One new entry is "steampunk," defined as "science fiction dealing with 19th-century societies dominated by historical or imagined steam-powered technology."

And the word "catfish" takes on an added definition, referring to a person who sets up a false social networking profile for deceptive purposes.

"These are words our editors have decided to put in based on usage in the English language," said Merriam-Webster spokeswoman Meghan Lunghi. "They look for widespread, sustained usage — and when they think the usage merits it, they include it."

AT&T bets on video with $48.5 billion DirecTV bid

AT&T Inc. plans to pay $48.5 billion to buy DirecTV, in the latest sign that the wireless industry and the U.S. television market are set to converge as customers consume more video on their mobile devices.

The deal highlights AT&T's pressing need for fresh avenues of growth beyond the maturing U.S. cellular business, which has become increasingly competitive.

The combination with DirecTV, the No. 1 U.S. satellite TV provider with 20 million customers, would beef up Dallas-based AT&T's packages of cellular, broadband, TV and fixed-line phone services.

For DirecTV, the deal will enable it to offer broadband Internet for the first time to its U.S. customers. REUTERS

Sex addict movie. Strauss-Kahn to sue over subject matter

Former IMF chief Dominique Strauss-Kahn has instructed lawyers to sue the makers of a movie in which veteran French star Gerard Depardieu plays a sex addict who commits a sexual assault on a hotel maid, his lawyer said on Monday.

"Welcome to New York" by Abel Ferrara, which had a private screening on the sidelines of the Cannes film festival at the weekend and has been on pay-per-view in France, is billed as a piece of fiction and comes with a legal disclaimer.

But Strauss-Kahn's lawyer said the film was defamatory in that its subject matter was similar to the accusations leveled against Strauss-Kahn, who quit the Washington-based International Monetary Fund in 2011 after a New York hotel maid accused him of sexual assault.

Kremlin says again

Putin has ordered troops from Ukraine

The Kremlin announced on Monday that President Vladimir Putin had ordered Russian forces near Ukraine back to their bases, but NATO and the United States said they saw no sign of a pullback and Moscow had failed to carry out such promises before.

Moscow has massed tens of thousands of troops near the border regions where pro-Russian separatists have declared independent states, and Kiev and its Western allies fear they could be used to invade in support of the rebels.

Ukraine holds a presidential election on Sunday, which Western countries consider a crucial event in resolving the country's crisis. The United States and EU have threatened to ramp up sanctions on Moscow if it interferes in the vote.

Money matters. Credit card mistakes most people make

Misinformation has made our knowledge of credit cards a little muddy, and therefore, there are several common mistakes most credit card holders don't know they're making. Here are the top ones:

Closing old credit cards

Most think that once they pay off a credit card, it's in their best interest to close it. Closing the card can impact your credit utilization ratio, however, which can negatively affect your credit score.

Applying for multiple cards

Opening new credit cards is one way to improve your credit scores because it adds to your total available credit. That being said, applying for multiple credit cards at once could end up having the reverse

Don't ignore monthly credit card statements

Verify that you made all purchases yourself, and report any unknown transactions to your bank as possible fraud. This is key to protecting yourself from any fraudulent use.

effect. Too many hard inquiries on your credit report can negatively impact your scores, which will make you seem desperate for more credit. Instead, apply for a credit card that you're confident you'll get approved for.

Maxing out credit cards

Even though there are circumstances when you may need to use most of your credit, it's best to pay the balance as quickly as you can. If you don't, it can have a negative impact on your credit scores. Similar to closing old credit cards, maxing out your credit cards raises your credit utilization ratio. JULIE MYHRE

What is your schedule like working three part-time jobs?

My first job is as a social worker; I work three days a week at a middle school. I also teach a range of fitness classes at Equinox Monday through Friday at 6 a.m. and 7 a.m. and then again at 6 p.m. and 7 p.m. My third job is as a training leader for Shape Up New York, which provides free fitness classes. I run a training program that helps people become fitness leaders within their communities. Those classes are on Thursday nights, Friday afternoons and Saturday mornings.

Amanda Young teaches up to four fitness classes a day.

Honestly, social work and fitness are both equally my passions. It just worked out that I was able to have this balance.

Are you working all three jobs just for the

They're really more passion driven. I live by that overused saying that when you do what you love it never feels like work. I've always been interested in helping others achieve their physical, mental and spiritual goals, and both careers allow me to fulfill my own personal goal of helping others.

Getting the right professor to recommend you

College. Here's how to make the recommendation process go as smoothly as possible.

Thinking about applying to grad school this fall? Now is the perfect time to start thinking about which professors you would like to ask for recommendation letters. These simple steps can make the entire process easier for everyone.

1 Ask someone who knows you well: "My biggest tip is 'Make sure the professor really knows you,'" says Julie Dodd, a journalism professor at the University of Florida who often blogs about jobs and internships.

Dodd also points out, "You are kind of auditioning [for the recommendation] while you are in class."

Make it a point to talk to your instructor about your other interests; don't be shy about mentioning your extracurriculars or your work-study positions.

Dodd recently recommended a student who had taken a class with her while he was a sophomore, yet made it a point to regularly stop by her office for two years afterward. When he asked her for a job recommendation, "I was really invested in him," she says. "I wanted him to get a job."

2 Ask as early as possible

Give at least a month's notice before your deadline, says Dodd, though earlier is always better. Keep in mind also that lots of students are also asking for letters and that the deadlines are all at the same time.

3 Take no for an answer

If a professor tells you that he or she isn't the best person to write your letter, believe him or her and move on.

4 Provide all of the information they need

Make a folder with a copy of your résumé, a list of all the programs you're

See more at www.metro.us

If you worked closely with a professor, he or she could be the one to write your letter. / PIXLAND

Do this

Ask in person, not over email

Schedule a meeting with your professor so that you can talk about the schools you are applying to, your goals and why you want to go to grad school. Making a request for a recommendation over email or just after class can seem too casual and rushed.

Dodd adds that you should also tell your professor why you would like a recommendation from him or her specifically.

"Saying something such as, 'I think that as a student, you really saw me as a writer,' lets the professor know why you're making the request," she says.

applying to and note all the classes you took with the professor, listing each semester.

5 Remember that you are asking for a favor Ask nicely and send a thank-you note afterward. (Also, be sure to let your instructor know which school you picked; don't leave them wondering.)

CULTURE

Blipp it

Rob Kardashian has a big surprise for you

Rob Kardashian has stepped out for the first time in weeks to get to Europe in time for Kimye's wedding. And let's just say that it was a er, um, huge surprise to see him again. Since stepping out, Rob Kardashian has trended on Twitter, and people are busy commenting on the reality star's weight gain. But we guess someone had to mention the elephant (poor choice of words, I know) in the room.

Twitter feed

We check in with some of Hollywood's biggest names to see what they've been up to — in their own words, in 140 characters or fewer.

Today, Rihanna clears up rumors, Bob Saget is being inappropriate and Alan Cumming feels dirty.

@rihanna: #PHAKE !!!! Let's be clear, I do NOT have an IG account!

@bobsaget: Thanks for all the kind bday wishes. When I was born I came out testicles first. The doctor slapped them and I've been doing it ever since.

@Alancumming: My phone autocorrected 'vice versa' to 'vice Versace' I feel dirty

An SAT question: If 5 Seconds of Summer, pictured here, flash two fingers, will they be 7 Seconds, or will they still be confused with One Direction? / ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

THE WORD

Lasse Emil Kristiansen takes on the world of gossip.

LASSE EMIL KRISTIANSEN
@metronewyork
letters@metro.us

Who are 5 Seconds of Summer?

By now, everyone knows Kendall Jenner flubbed her lines at the Billboard Music Awards and almost introduced 5 Seconds of Summer as One Direction. But can you blame her? I mean, there are five guys in 1D and only four guys in 5 Seconds! Here's a primer for Kendall, if she's reading: 5 Seconds of Summer, also known as 5SOS, are an Aussie band whose members range in age from 18 to 20. They aren't the singing and dancing type of boy band; these dudes rock out! And the catchy lyrics to their single, "She Looks So Perfect," could be confused with 1D's "What Makes You Beautiful," if it didn't have a refrain about American Apparel underwear.

Can't make it to the drive-in? Invite Amber Rose over!

Amber Rose (remind me, why is she famous?) wore what looked like a flat screen TV as shades for the Billboard Music Awards Sunday night. Looking at her makes me want to eat popcorn while watching a chick flick on those shades. Maybe that could be a way for her to get into the movie biz. If you can't be on the screen, then be the screen! Just saying.

Talking points

Thicke's "Get Her Back" is quite likely about Paula Patton.

Thicke still wants his wife back

Robin Thicke also made a statement while he accepted a Billboard Award for "Blurred Lines." "Most importantly, I'd like to thank my wife for her love and support, and for putting up with me all these years," he said. The same night he performed a new song called "Get Her Back," he also dedicated it to his soon-to-be ex-wife, Paula Patton. But Paula, seriously, can't you just take him back already, so the rest of us don't have to watch him try so hard? It gets pretty tiring.

Timberlake hates Donald Sterling, too

Just like everyone else in the entire world, Justin Timberlake is not very fond of Donald Sterling. He made that very clear Sunday night when he accepted a Top Artist Billboard Award via satellite. "I want to thank everyone on Earth, except Donald Sterling." We want to thank you, Justin, for being awesome!

Best-selling author Emily Giffin is known for telling a good love story. Whether it's about falling for a best friend's fiancé in "Something Borrowed" or the gnawing feeling of wondering "what if" about someone you let go long ago in "Love The One You're With," Giffin has made a career of exploring the complications of love and lust. Her new book, "The One & Only" is no exception. We got Giffin to spill details, plus she tells us what she really thinks about love.

The setting for "The One & Only" is completely different from your past books. How did you get into the sports culture of Texas?

I have been passionate about college athletics since I was a little girl and there are few worlds more colorful than Texas football. I actually spent some time in Dallas and visited SMU's spring training. I also had several coaches, including Hall-of-Famer Jim Boeheim, read early drafts to make sure that the character of Coach Clive Carr and the story, particularly the NCAA-investigation subplot, felt authentic. That being said, the sports background is just the setting for the story, which, at its core, is centered on a young woman dealing with difficult, important life choices and the unresolved feelings that ultimately complicate them. You don't need to love football to enjoy this book, any more than you have to love boxing to watch "Rocky."

How did the idea for the book come to you initially?

All of my books generally begin with a core theme or idea. For "The One & Only," I wanted to explore the idea of unconventional love. I think if we're honest, the way most of us think about romantic love is pretty narrowly defined, and there's a tendency for us to dismiss, or at least feel uncomfortable with, anything outside of those seemingly impossible love. Do you believe love conquers all in real life?

This is definitely the "big question" in the book, and I'm really happy with the way "The One & Only" ended — it felt right for the characters and true to the story as a whole. But what happens in the book is just that. ... a conclusion to one fictional story and not necessarily a reflection of my personal beliefs. Honestly, I'm not really definitions. With this story, I really wanted to portray a relationship that, while difficult for some to understand and accept at first, is beautiful and idyllic in its own right. I also wanted to consider the question of whether true love can really conquer all, especially in the face of judgment and scrutiny from those outside of it.

sure whether love can conquer all in real life. ... I like to believe it can!

The intricacies of female friendships are something else you write a lot about in your books, and this one is no exception. Why are adding these types of relationships to your stories important to you?

My books are all relationship-driven. I write about mothers and daughters, husbands and wives and, of course, friendships. Friendships are integral to who we are as people — and I think they are particularly important to women. But even our closest friendships can be complicated and layered. The simple, easy ones aren't always the most worthwhile ones.

What is a real-life love story you love?

Kate and William. I believe in their sweet happily ever after. But the pretty, fairy tale ones aren't the only ones I'm drawn to. I think there is great beauty in relationships that go through really rough, dark times — and still survive.

Repertoire. There are so many Fassbinder films for one to see

Rainer Werner Fassbinder isn't the most prolific filmmaker there ever was, but over 40 films in under about 14 years is nothing to sneeze at. The filmography of the German filmmaker, who died after ingesting a toxic drug cocktail at only 37, is tough to surmount, not only due to volume, but because of how bleak and rigorous his vision is. His films relentlessly explored sadism; his world view could be summed up in the title of his debut, 1969's "Love is Colder Than Death."

Through June 1, Lincoln Center will burn through part one of their complete Fassbinder retrospective. (Part two begins in November.) Tonight you can catch "The Merchant of Four Seasons" (8:30 p.m.), about a fruit peddler whose life starts out bad and gets much worse. Also this week are such high points as the film "Beware of a Holy Whore," and the hypnotic lesbian drama "The Bitter Tears of Petra von Kant."

Singing

Interview. "The Voice" finalists share their journeys to the singing competition's big finale.

The heat is on as "The Voice" comes to a close. We caught up with the last artists standing as they prepared to sing their hearts out for the competition's finale.

Christina Grimmie, the 21-year-old pop singer, left her hometown in South Jersey to follow her dreams in Los Angeles. Grimmie began her music career on YouTube and now has over 2 million subscribers. The YouTube sensation got all four chairs to turn and went with Team Adam.

"I have been busier than ever before and my memory has gotten a lot better too because we have to memorize a song a week,"

Grimmie tells us. "[But] the biggest challenge for me is being away from my family. We got to go home for a week after the Blinds, but now we stay here to work on the show."

Josh Kaufman, the family man from Indianapolis, supported his wife and three kids as an SAT prep tutor and band member playing local gigs. The soul singer got all four chairs to turn in the Blinds and originally went with Team Adam, but was later stolen by Usher. Kaufman hopes that winning "The Voice" will allow him to support his family as a full-time musician.

"Usher has a unique coaching style," says Kaufman. "He has me run around the stage before rehearsal and sometimes he'll have me sing in the mirror. But he's a really good communicator."

Jake Worthington, the country kid from Texas, discovered his passion for music after a terrible foot-

Q&A

Win or lose, what are you walking away with?

"The first time I walked on that stage, I was already a winner along with everyone else. Win or lose, I walk away with a chin held high, a good conscience and everything I learned in every vocal lesson."

WORTHINGTON

"I've learned that if you set your mind to something and pursue it, it will eventually pay off."

KAUFMAN

"The greatest reward for me has been inspiring people. Despite the challenges I might face as an artist, it motivates me to see that other people are impacted by my music. I feel like I've been called to do this, and I don't want to do anything else."

In his opinion

What was Marlon Brando like on "The Godfather"?

This might sound like heresy to some: More right for "The Godfather," that part, was the guy who starred in "The Sopranos." [James Gandolfini] was more willing to play the pr—, Brando was more heroic. On the second day of filming, there was a makeup guy who came in the dressing room, saying, "He's playing this like a kindly old uncle." He was more romantic. But Brando was wonderful to work with. His scene with Al Pacino, he had a big sign in a tree. He was reading his lines. [Laughs] He was a master at reading those lines all over the place.

Interview. Robert Duvall is as rambunctious in real life as he is in "A Night in Old Mexico."

Robert Duvall may be 82, but you wouldn't know it. He's still energetic, personable and not afraid to speak his mind. He's promoting his new film, "A Night in Old Mexico," in which he plays an old-timer whose land has been taken from him by a company. Instead of moping, he heads out on the town with the grandson (Jeremy Irvine) he has just met.

This screenplay was written 25 years ago. Bill Wittliff wrote it. He wrote the screen adaptation for "Lonesome Dove," but he had written this as an original screenplay before. So when we finished "Lonesome Dove," he said, "Let's go do this." I said, "It's too soon. [Laughs] I've got to get a little older first."

What drew you to this character? He was just a nice character. He's a good character — a real Texas character that Whitliff understands. He's like a descendent of the guys from "Lonesome Dove."

Some have said that you like to say in character during production. Nah. I mean, some of it sticks with you. But to stay in character all day long, that would be too laborious. Tiresome. It's a game, like kids playing house. It's adults playing house for money. It's make-believe.

You went to a New York theater school at the same time as Dustin Hoffman, Gene Hackman and James Caan. Do you still hang out with them often?

No, no. I don't see most of those guys. The country's so big. One guy I keep up with is Jimmy Caan. Periodically I see Wilford Brimley. He used to be a bodyguard for Howard Hughes. Interesting guy. He sings jazz with a band. He sings very well. He puts out albums. You put them on and people go, "That's not Mel Tormé. Who is it?" I say, "It's Wilford Brimley."

Early in your career you were in the 1969 film of "True Grit." What was John Wayne like?

Somebody said we didn't get along. That's not true at all. We got along. It was the director [Henry Hathaway]. He said to an actor, "When I say 'action,' tense up, goddammit!" Can you imagine your boss telling you that? It's crazy. It's the opposite of what you should say.

Interview. Griffin Dunne leads the 'The Discoverers'

Griffin Dunne was the star and producer of one of the definitive views of scary old pre-Giuliani New York: Martin Scorsese's "After Hours" from 1985, in which he plays a data processor who heads to SoHo for a date and winds up almost being murdered by an angry mob. That would never happen today.

"You could lie down in the street and sleep there now," Dunne says of the neighborhood, now perpetually mobbed by clothes-hungry tourists. He says he was recently looking at a SoHo building only to belatedly realize it was one of the key sets in that film. "It's changed so much. A spooky loft is now a Gap or a Timberland."

"After Hours," regrettably, has been one of only a few times Dunne has played lead. He does it again in the serio-comic indie "The Discoverers," in which he portrays a historian forced to drag his two kids to a historical recreation camp to rescue his grieving father.

Dunne has done his share of supporting work; most recently, he was in "Dallas Buyers Club." But this role is more than just a change of pace. "It's great to have a sense of continuity with a character," he says. "With [supporting roles], you do your part in four days or whatever it is. You're a needle dropped into a

With the Material Girl

In 1987, Dunne co-starred with Madonna in "Who's That Girl." "She was hilarious and had an incredibly great take on the insanity around her," he says. In fact, it was unusual for him to be near the center of the madness. "At one point, we were shooting on 5th Avenue the same day as the Marathon. We were near the finish line. And these people would be right at the finish line, but they'd give up to watch Madonna."

The role is reminiscent of his "After Hours" character: the exasperated glutton for punishment, although he feels this one is more mature.

"That comes from having a guy who's an academic in that small world, who's written a book that is intellectual and overly long in a culture where there are popular history books," he says. "Being a filmmaker in a changing medium wasn't that big a leap for me. I could draw on that fear of being older and out-of-date and having to reinvent yourself to keep moving forward."

The details

Andaz Peninsula Papagayo, Guanacaste, Costa Rica

How to get there: JetBlue offers direct flights to Liberia, Costa Rica, from JFK. The flight is five hours, and expect a 30-minute car ride from the airport to the hotel.

Refined luxury at Costa Rica's Andaz Peninsula Papagayo

The hotel has a private beach, but you'll have to tear yourself away from the pool area first. / ANDAZ

Island life. Take in what Costa Rica has to offer at this chic new resort.

Say the word "resort" to your chicest jet-setting friend, and he or she will probably scoff. And an eye roll might be apt as well — a typical tropical beach resort can bring to mind an ecological eyesore with no direct connection to the paradise or its inhabitants. It's the place where the locals who work there are forced into Hawaiian shirts while they sling frozen drinks to pale visitors noshing on chicken tenders by the pool.

However, there is a sea change occurring in the realm of resorts: Smart hotel chains have realized that their savvy, informed customers are rebelling against homogenous experiences. Enter the Andaz boutique chain, a subsidiary of Hyatt. Andaz works with the community, using local architects, artists and chefs to fashion their hotels and cuisine to make for a more authentic experience, while also retaining the element of luxury and familiarity that Hyatt guests expect. Andaz bears little resemblance to a behemoth resort chain whose lone architectural or stylistic distinction is the fact that it could be anywhere.

The latest Andaz property to enter the travel market is the Andaz Peninsula Papagayo, nestled between the Gulf of Papagayo and the blue waters of Culebra Bay in Guanacaste, Costa Rica. It was designed by Costa Rican architect Ronald Zurcher and is decorated with the work of local artist Salvador Odre.

The resort's private beach offers activities such as top-notch paddleboarding, kayaking and snorkeling.

The staff at Andaz Peninsula Papagayo take pride in where they work; the beautiful Culebra Bay and its surrounding rainforest are the focal point of the hotel's decor rather than a side note. Everything is open — the rooms, the dining areas, the walkways between rooms and the path to the beach all let you experience paradise. And if it's not open, it's enclosed in clear glass. With the resort's open concept, you can take in monkeys chattering in the background as well as the sweet smell of the rich earth. It was especially nice to see open-air spaces utilized in the hotel's Onda Spa, where trained masseuses work out the kinks while a natural breeze tickles your back.

The same philosophy is applied to the chic, modern hotel rooms, which encourage you to shower with the glass door open so you are one with nature, rather than shut off from it.

When you sit to dine at any of the property's three restaurants, you're encouraged to be outside. Over tapas at Chao Pescao, you can sip on artisanal cocktails on the deck while vines sway above you. At the more fine-dining restaurant, Ostra, the walls are open so you are always looking out to the sea. Casual dining spot Rio Bhongo is surrounded by an infinity pool and bay breezes.

And instead of the trees being stripped and paved for your walk down to the private beach, you nimbly meander through the jungle. This resort is paradise, experienced.

Advice. One mom makes the case for an older, time-tested and approved parenting style

Endless pressure to check off items on a lengthy list of short-term goals is the hallmark of modern parenting. Therefore, it has to go — we need to go retro. Retro parenting doesn't refer to the trend of opting out of the workforce and going strictly domestic; it means standing firm against modern parenting pressure without the reassurance of immediate results.

This is no easy task when it feels like you're risking your kid's entire future if he or she fails to score 100 percent on a spelling test or misses a ballet class. Moms need to resolve to think in the long term and resist the clamor to pile more activities into kids' schedules. Resolve to ignore the disapproving raised eyebrow when someone learns you give your kids chores rather than flashcard drills.

Because a sense of humor helps when going against the status quo, check out "The Three Martini Playdate." Although the book's tone is tongue-in-cheek, it offers advice for parents to teach children practical skills actually required for adulthood, such as manners, cooperation, chores and, in keeping with the title, cocktail-making for adults.

Are these old-fashioned parenting tips the secret to domestic bliss?

GETTY IMAGES

The original retro-parenting work, "The Hurried Child" is also a worthwhile read. Among other things, David Elkind counseled against the full schedules of enrichment activities that parents push on their children to build up their college application résumés. A résumé of boutique experiences probably doesn't teach the child much about real life and likely fails to impress these days anyway. The modern standout application for college comes from the kid who built a summer lawn-mowing business or babysitting service.

Constant accomplishment-reaching can make us feel like successful parents, but these books show you how slow down and parent with substance. LESLIE LOFTIS

On their own

Because how-tos help, I recommend "Under Pressure" or "The New Six Point Plan for Raising Happy, Healthy Children." These books build on the foundation that we need to let children own their successes and their failures. The first book mostly explains the research, and the second is loaded with practical advice.

Letters

Downstream detriments IRS follows the law

Re: 'Salmoning is safer for cyclists' (Metro, May 16-18) I couldn't agree more with letter writer Jack Dickenson. As a young child first learning to navigate the streets of a small town on my bicycle, I was taught by my dad that you always ride your bicycle AGAINST the traffic! I want to see what's coming at me and if it's an out-of-control vehicle (for whatever reason). I want to be able to ditch the bike and dive for my life! You ride with the traffic and you're a sitting duck! As for the disorderly conduct charge against Baldwin — the cops created the "problem" and shouldn't have arrested him. He's a star; he's going to create a crowd no matter what.

MICHELLE CALABRO, VIA EMAIL

Re: 'Would Dems be OK with the IRS on their backs?' (Metro, May 16-18) Why do you keep publishing letters that have clear misstatements of fact? Letter writer Ron Shelton seems to think that the IRS only reviewed right-wing applications. Not true at all. Many progressives were also reviewed, but Rep. Issa ONLY complained about the Tea Party ones. Also, the progressives want clear and open rules, while the Republicans want special deals.

Lundqvist leads Blueshirts to 2-0 series lead

NHL playoffs. The Rangers return to New York looking unbeatable.

The story leading up to Game 2 focused on the man in net for the Canadiens. But the Rangers' All-Star goaltender stole the headlines coming out of Game 2.

Henrik Lundqvist made 40 stops as the Rangers beat Montreal, 3-1, to take a commanding 2-0 series lead in the Eastern Conference finals.

Carey Price was ruled out of net for the remainder of the series for the Canadiens, with Dustin Tokarski getting the start. Tokarski was effective, if not remarkable.

The Canadiens were the aggressors early on, with Max Pacioretty giving them the early lead after chest bumping the puck into the net off a bad clearance by Lundqvist.

But Ryan McDonagh answered back 17 seconds later when his slapshot deflected off a defender to even the score. Rick Nash scored the go-ahead goal with 1:02 left in the first.

Martin St. Louis, a day after his mother's funeral, netted a goal in the second period to make it 3-1.

Reilly puts a ring on his finger — forever

NFL. After losing five rings, Jets draft pick Trevor Reilly decided to just get his wife's initials tattooed on him.

It's common to see an NFL player with a tattoo — in fact it's a rare thing to see a player who isn't inked up. But Jets seventh-round pick Trevor Reilly's one and only tattoo is a matter of necessity.

Married since Sept. 4, 2011, Reilly recently got a tattoo of his wife's initials on his left hand where his wedding band would go. The letters "JKR" for Jessica Kristie Reilly are prominent — a necessity because of his own absent-minded ways, he says. Turns out, he misplaced his wedding ring on more than one occasion.

"This is so I don't have to wear a ring anymore, I got my wife's initials," Reilly said. "I've been against tattoos my whole life, but [I] started losing wedding rings."

But the number of times he's lost his ring is the shocking part.

"Five, and I bent one one time because I forgot to take it off. I told my wife, 'I'm getting tatted up,' and she said, 'Fine by me,'"

Reilly was a standout at Utah and is already married with two daughters, Nelli and Shayn. He has the initials of his wife Jessica tattooed, inset, on his ring finger. / GETTY IMAGES, KRISTIAN DYER

Reilly's résumé

Reilly was a member of the high school class of 2006, but is getting to the NFL four years later than most.

- The top player in Rivals.com's high school class of 2006 was Percy Harvin, who's played five NFL seasons already.

- Matthew Stafford (No. 6) and Tim Tebow (No. 22) were also in Rivals' top 25 recruits that year.
- Reilly originally committed to Texas Tech.

brother in a motorcycle accident when both were younger. Then two years ago, his daughter Shayn was diagnosed with kidney cancer. Even though she is now in the clear, he admits it took a toll on him. He also played the entirety of the 2012 season for Utah on a torn ACL, an injury he said no longer impacts him.

After the first day of rookie minicamp on Friday, head coach Rex Ryan said Reilly "really fit the profile we're looking for."

Reilly was the last of 12 picks for the Jets in the May 8 NFL draft, but he is ready to step in and contribute right away, and he seems tailor-made for special teams. Ryan compared him to another Jets player who succeeded in that role, and even on defense.

"I've been impressed with him," Ryan said. "He's kind of got, like, Garrett McIntyre [in him]. [He's] just a tough guy and just loves to play."

And at age 26, after two years on a Mormon mission, he's not your average rookie.

"He's a mature guy," Ryan said. "As he told us all today, he was an All-America — honorable mention."

Coaching search

FISHER SERVED AS HEAD OF THE NBA PLAYERS ASSOCIATION. / GETTY IMAGES

Reports: Knicks 'open' to Jackson, waiting to talk to Fisher

The Knicks coaching search goes on, with ESPN delivering dual reports on possible candidates.

President Phil Jackson is reportedly "open" to speaking to former Golden State coach Mark Jackson. The former Knicks point guard seems like a long shot, with no connection to Phil Jackson. Mark Jackson has already jumped back into the broadcast booth with ESPN for the remainder of the playoffs.

Another option, Derek Fisher, is tied up with playing in the Western Conference finals with the Thunder. Fisher, who played under Phil Jackson with the Lakers, hasn't officially said he will retire after the season. But he does appear interested in coaching in the future.

ESPN reports Phil Jackson would at least like to speak to his former pupil before hiring anyone else. METRO
